JANUARY 1, 1879. To-day another year is born I And, as of yore, we hall the morn That brings the Carrier's harvest day, And with it this his be 'e lay, The custom has been honored long To greet the Carrier and his song ; So once again, kind patrons all, I come to make my annual call,

The Goes are hard, somebody says One reason why nobody pays, And hence the banks, and Carriers, too, Don't see too clearly what to do. Though business mon must work along, Selling their goods for merely a song, Little they know the Carrier's cares With one day only for cosh repairs, These times were enased by bad misrale, They are not from the Democrats'school. For there 'tis taught to rule for all, The masses great, the rulers small; Geenbuckers surely em't be blomed, For then they were not even named. Then, who's at fact for our sad plight You cannot now but grees aright.

E'er since by fraud Hayes took his seat, Wer since that no'er forgotten cheat, This man has had a roughish cace, Near him always Fraud's dack face. At war with foes, with friends no pence, But nothing relieves his auxious cares, Not even according county firm,

And with the aid of arrant scames They fought a fight as no'er before Was heard of in ancient or modern fore With every kind of foul device, Directed by rich Don's advice, They carried on through all the State A game of buying none its mate, And thus it was that Andy Dill Does not the Governor's office litt. Circulars, carris capie out in gareks.

E're this he's found his time was wrant Holds North and South in firm embrace Hatred has to love given place, The fever-stricken asked for aid, The north its thousands gladly paid, And proved that though ambitious men Would open wide the chasm again, The people with united hands For peace have spoken their demand-To-day let's all past wrongs forget,

Think only of our blessings great, Resolving that the opening year We'll make for others full of cheer; Doing and wishing for every one As if the sume for us was done Every heart doth hold a cell In which a perfect love doth dwell And to this cell there is a door And to this door there is a lock That flies not back at every knock, But backward spring can only be By him who holds the proper key,

Consequently after the setting and the moult, we expect a ecommencement of the laying period. How unwise then to "break up" the sitting hen, and feed her with slimulating food! Then again the young hen lays a larger litter than the aged fowl. It is probable that the first and second years of the hen's life are the most productive of eggs. How unprofitable

The hen keeper who succeeds the bes is he who exercises the most judicious supervision over his fleck : who allows of wheat per acre at $1 per bashel; 50 the natural proclivities to take their bushels of corn per acre at 50 cents per course, and who checks the sitting proslivitles of aged fowls, in whom the egg producing organs are weakened, often takes in setting an unprofitable (to the owner) rest. Lot the hen keeper remember that to produce the largest number of eggs for a flock, he must keep young fowls; these he must study the time that the crops occupied the in order to cationally treat, and must vary his food and his methods as experience, carefully consulted, will ul-

CORN MEAL AND WHEAT BRAN The following puper was prepared by

Isane Eyre for the Bucks county agriillural society : i ration of soil, why are farmers so ex-feeding daily cows or fattoning stock, what is the value of a ton of wheat bran for the same purpose? The unswer to this question depends very much on the manner of using the two articles. If they are to be fed separately, the bran stand this they will be able to decide cara meal. But if they are to be mixed is not worth much if any more than together and fed to milk cows, the bran is worth the most by about fifty per cent, of the excess in the bulk of the bian, and birn being more than twice as bulky as the meal, the difference h favor of the bran will be in the neighborhood of $5 or $6 per ton. I mean by this that two quarts of com-meal and three quarts of bran, given at one foed, will produce quite as good results as the three quarts of bran will weigh about two-thirds as much as the two quarts of meal, the difference in favor of the bran is fully $5 per ton. I make this difference when fed to milk cows, but if fed to steers for beef I consider the proportions should be different,-That is, three quarts of meal should be mixed with two quarts of brun, to proluce the best results. But one of the most valuable uses for which coarse wheat bran can be applied is to feed it to laying bens about once a day, changing it on alternate days from the mornng to the noon or evening feed, by mixing it with pure warm water or with mlik. It has been found that hens fed about once a day on wet bran, and once a day on corn or oats, will lay many more eggs in a given time than it fee entirely on one kind of feed; therefore. bran for feed for that kind of stock is worth fully 20 per cont, more than corr or corn meal. But if the bran is to be the only feed, then the meal would be
